Director's Notes

With a book, we know when we reach the last chapter we are near the end. Watching a movie, the closing scene usually wraps up everything in a nice, neat package. (Although nowadays, not always!) In the heyday of record albums, musicians and artists carefully chose the last song to make a statement on the entire body of music. In each instance, we anticipate memorable endings that resonate and somehow connect with our innermost feelings.

The Tippecanoe County Public library is now at the closing chapter for our first true library branch. This December, the Tippecanoe County/ Ivy Tech Library, fondly called the "Campus Library," ends its public library operations. It was one of America's rare joint libraries. Given the growth and changes in our community and both institutions since 2002, this closing was inevitable.

Like great books, movies, and music, we take pride in and cherish our memories of many shared successes. We know what a privilege it was to help create and sustain this unique environment for both the college and the community. Library staff remember the cordial and professional relationships they built. We remember how the convenience of a second service outlet was incalculable for thousands of library customers. We know many adults used branch computing resources to effectively learn new technologies. The Murder by the Book adult book discussion group remembers this building as their "kitchen table" for engaging discussions. Adults and caregivers who brought in babies, toddlers, and preschool children chuckle with us over memories of attending their first story time. Library staff are grateful for many years of well-attended summer reading programs.

As this chapter comes to a close, we will miss the partnership with Ivy Tech. It has been a good fifteen years, and together we enjoyed a good run!

In some books you find carefully crafted clues that a sequel is in the works. At TCPL, one sequel is already written. The sequel is your new Wyandotte Branch. This change in location reflects the library's long-term plans to make library resources conveniently accessible throughout Tippecanoe County. With a public meeting room for up to 100 people (seated), a digital arts suite, study rooms, a limestone fireplace, and a drive-up book return, this 14,000-square-foot building exemplifies the new neighborhood branch model. Its collection includes print and digital books, movies, music, magazines, newspapers, and downloadables, such as OverDrive, Zinio, and hoopla.

We sincerely believe this new Wyandotte sequel is the right decision. We delight in the opportunity to make more connections with individuals and families at that location. Still, we will always remember, and hope many customers will remember the Campus Library. We hope it has earned the same kind of affection thousands of folks express when they reminisce about the Wells Memorial Library.

What now? TCPL will continue to provide the best possible service to all library customers throughout our county. What's next? The Board of Trustees believes another sequel is due within 3-4 years. As the southern part of the county continues to grow, the need for a neighborhood branch there increases. Thankfully, this same growth blesses us all with an expanded tax base that supports another neighborhood branch.

Great books and public libraries usually reflect their communities. Story by story, chapter by chapter, sequels are being written in our daily lives. We hope all will be rewarding page-turners!

Digital Keepsakes & Holiday Gifts

TCPL Family Memory Center Downtown Library

Expecting family members to visit over the holidays? At the TCPL Family Memory Center you can make keepsake copies of treasured family photos, videos, and mementos for gifts and sharing.

The center, a 50th anniversary gift from the Friends of TCPL, is a fully-equipped, 300 square-foot area specially-designed for researching, preserving, and recording family histories.

Library resources include microfilm copies of the Journal and Courier (as early as the 1840s), U.S. Census records, and access to a variety of databases, including the library edition of Ancestry.com.

Researchers and family historians may use the room's photo scanner/printer, VHS-to-DVD recorder, digital and standard microfilm readers, three PC workstations, and a large sorting table.

Staff members are available to answer questions. You may save files to your digital device or e-mail files and images to home computers. For take-home copies, please bring your own DVD-R. Archival-quality (acid-free) copies can be made at TCPL for $1 per page.
