TCPL Portable Hotspots

In our age of social media, smart phones, and a variety of electronic devices, Internet access is a necessity for many. The presumption is, almost everyone has direct, high-speed broadband access anytime they want or need it. However, Pew Research Center studies (2016 -2017) indicate only three out of four people have convenient, broadband access at home.

A recent Journal & Courier article reported high-speed access is still very limited in remote areas of Tippecanoe County. This is due to a lack of already-buried fiber optic cable and economic constraints. A couple of years ago, the City of Lafayette and several partners provided wireless access to several blocks downtown. In March of 2017, to help Lafayette become a "smart city," these wireless services were expanded.

Access to information resources has always been a vital library service. That is why libraries have offered free access to computer-based technologies for nearly three decades. In this decade alone, onsite library access to digital technologies has increased tremendously. Today, TCPL provides filtered, high-speed Wi-Fi inside all library buildings. But what happens with Internet access for a percentage of customers after they leave our buildings?

Recently, TCPL added something new and perhaps unexpected to our collections. It provides a service, and customers may check it out for two weeks, like a book. The unique difference is this service helps library customers improve their Internet access, even when they are away from the library. In addition to improving Internet access, it improves customer access to TCPL's digital resources and the entire materials collection.

To accomplish this objective, the library now offers portable devices and high-speed connections via reliable Wi-Fi signals. These devices are called "hotspots." They connect you whether you are at home or away from home. Just like cell phones, hotspots link your digital devices to cellular networks. With a TCPL hotspot, your own digital devices, and a cellular network, you can connect to the Internet. These devices can be used even when you are traveling away from home (within the U.S.).

Initially, your library is offering 30 portable hotspots. Each offers unlimited data and connects at a speed of up to 4G LTE with the Sprint Cellular Network. Throughout history, people have counted on public libraries to be the "great equalizer" by facilitating lifelong learning. On August 6, 1991, the Worldwide Web became available to the public. More than 25 years later, TCPL moves toward "equalizing" this resource with 24/7 access to this modern convenience.

Today, portable hotspots are one more way we can help fulfill our mission of assuring equitable public access to library resources. We believe this is a valuable resource for many customers. We hope it will help embolden people to join us and "enjoy and explore excellent resources that enrich their lives." Please take advantage of the opportunity to check out this device or recommend it to people you may know who will benefit from this valued-added, new TCPL service.

Jos N. Holman

FAQ-Check One Out!

Who can check out hotspots? Anyone with a TCPL library account in good standing.

How do I check out the device? Ask for one at any TCPL library. Holds available.

How do I return it? Recharge your hotspot battery and return the hotspot to any TCPL library. Important: do not put hotspots in drop boxes.

What if something happens to it? If a hotspot is lost or damaged, an $80 fee is charged to your account.

SRCS: Statewide Lending

TCPL is now part of the Statewide Remote Circulation System (SRCS), coordinated by the Indiana State Library. With this new statewide resource you may:

- Access items from over 226 public and university libraries across the state.
- Borrow your choice of over 30 million items.
- Access an online catalog, browse, and make requests, just like placing a hold.
- Items are shipped to TCPL for you to pick up.
- It usually takes about two weeks to receive your items.
- To visit the SRCS website go to http://in.gov/library/SRCS.htm

Thanks to this new library collaboration, you can look up and request items as easily as you place TCPL holds.
