#Journeys: Life Reflections

Tuesdays, September & October
2-4 p.m. | Downtown

Help create a local history. Share your thoughts and memories with us. We will record them and make two copies: one for you and one for the Tippecanoe County oral history collection. All it takes is your reflections, 40-minutes, and two people. To sign up or request another day, time, or location, call 429-0113.

Director's Notes

As human beings and creatures of habit, we use lots of time and energy to stay in our comfort zones. At the library, "comfort" comes from our buildings, the things we enjoy here, and our specialized training. Several of the variables in library buildings are controlled by us, and they make being inside enticing. Territoriality contributes to one's comfort zone: it's attractive because it's "yours."

Your comfort zone may be complex and hard to describe, making it even more challenging for others. Only you know what makes you feel most comfortable. Only you can choose to share it with others. You may be thinking what does my comfort zone have to do with the library?

We are getting out and joining you in your comfort zones. Literally! We are leaving these controlled, air-conditioned library buildings for the great outdoors. Many things are beyond our control "out there." But if you are there, we plan to be there with you. Extra effort? Yes. Out of our comfort zones? Maybe.

Back in January, we began exploring ways to take library services and programs into the community. We hoped to see old friends who may not have been in our buildings lately. We planned to remind everyone how integral libraries are to this community. In addition to providing traditional library offerings, we have continued to add new and different resources. We have several new things to share.

This summer, we took our first steps. If you were at several festivals and community events, you probably saw us. We were pleased to see several thousand adults and children. We chatted in many delightful, impromptu ways. The weather was sometimes hot, sometimes rainy. We may have chuckled together about how Indiana weather is hard to predict or control!

We hope you picked up library brochures, handouts, and a fun giveaway or two. As we talked about library resources and news, we hope you could see we were clearly in our comfort zone. The library is one of our favorite topics.

Getting out of our buildings was certainly good for marketing and outreach. But we mainly enjoyed seeing you and participating in these outdoor events. Thanks for inviting us.

We now plan to make getting out and about a regular part of what we do. We have expanded our comfort zone to include it. We also plan to go beyond these interactions and experience community engagement in a variety of ways. We believe "turning outward" will be key in defining new ways the library can help meet new community needs.

As we expand our comfort levels, we welcome invitations to attend monthly or annual meetings at your club, agency, organization, or business. We are always glad to see you here, but we also look forward to joining you there. As our county continues to grow, we all need to maintain these positive connections. Your friends from the library may sometimes appear a bit out of our comfort zone, but we will be sharing library resources. That is something with which we are very comfortable.
