Director's Notes

By Jos N. Holman
Tippecanoe County Librarian

Many of us are wrapping up our celebration of "the most wonderful time of the year." Now, with hopes for a tolerably mild winter and the earliest spring possible, we head into the winter months of January, February, and March.

For me, because TCPL gets to start a new operational year each January 1st, this is always an exciting time of year. It is almost like a "do over" as TCPL establishes new priorities, gets a new budget, and starts tracking new statistics. Also, we get to develop and present new programs, buy new library materials, purchase new equipment, and make needed changes in services and policies. All these things move the library forward in directions that are meant to provide each library customer with improved services and programs.

Reading this newsletter, you will see two articles indicating forward movement through added resources. Quite frankly, both topics remind me of why I was willing to leave my career as a children's librarian and become an administrator. If I might take a personal moment, I must say that my eight years working as a children's librarian definitely created some of my most enjoyable library experiences and memories. I loved working directly with children and helping them connect to the library and literary experiences. I digress, so let me move on.

The biggest reason I went into administration was to directly influence children's services on a "big picture" basis. Driving forces in my decision were the ability to philosophically affect programming, develop relevant policies, and allocate finances for the improvement of youth services. Ultimately this meant instead of helping individual children, I could help thousands of children.

The two articles I mention here both relate to youth services. The first is the focus of the Tippecanoe County Public Library Foundation's annual appeal -- acquiring new technologies for youth services. With the opening of The Portal, TCPL technological resources for adults and teens took a gigantic leap forward. Not wanting to leave our younger children behind, we now hope to acquire the latest learning technologies for children. We plan to upgrade and replace our older, traditional youth computers. We also plan to purchase youth-appropriate software applications. Digital applications are increasingly integrated into our everyday lives. Today's 2-4 year olds will grow up with these and more advanced technologies. To help current and future generations connect to the library and the world at large, TCPL must forge ahead with new youth literacy and learning technologies. Stay tuned for the update on these changes early fall 2013.

The second youth-related article is about TCPL now offering you the online version of World Book, the World Book Online. When I was a children's librarian 24 years ago, the World Book Encyclopedia was one of the most trusted reference resources. By adding access to an online edition, World Book and TCPL continue the tradition of ensuring youth access to up-to-date visual representations of global knowledge. This online encyclopedia is comparable to and strongly competes with what is offered by other online resources.

The new World Book Online is extremely varied and provides value-added resources for many ages. You can still find the print edition of World Book at TCPL, but World Book Online assures online access to all TCPL cardholders from home computers and digital devices.

I rarely question my decision to go into administration. With the two aforementioned changes that positively impact our youth, I am reminded it was a good decision. My genuine interest in public library youth services continues. It is rewarding to know that what is work for me results in positive literary experiences for children. For me, this continues to be a "wonderful time of the year."

Gifts, Tech Tips & Branch News

Make A Gift: Youth Technologies

Libraries have long been beloved gathering places for our community's children. They explored the past and discovered their futures between the covers of books. Today and tomorrow, in addition to beloved books, our kids learn from the latest technologies and from a world of technologies still being imagined and developed. This is why the Library Foundation sent a mailing recently to past donors, and now encourages Pocket Edition readers to make your own gifts.

Specifically, we need to improve TCPL technologies for kids on a system wide basis. Our goal is to enhance learning and library usage by introducing new technologies in the Downtown Library youth room and in our branch youth areas. This includes a variety of technologies similar to what we now offer in The Portal, TCPL's new technologies center.

The new resources will serve kids under age 11. (The Portal serves primarily teen and adult cardholders.) Working together, we can purchase a variety of touch screen, literacy-based products and applications.

If you are interested in supporting this project, you may make a gift by visiting the Library Foundation's webpage at www.tcpl.lib.in.us/foundation and making a gift online. To make a gift in person or learn more about the Library Foundation's request, you also may contact Assistant County Librarian, Amy Paget at amypaget@tcpl.lib.in.us or 765-429-0101.

World Book Online: New Opportunities to Learn

Now available at our website, World Book Online combines new research features with the quality articles of print encyclopedias. We have subscribed to seven different formats. World Book Reference Center and Info Finder both have up to date articles and daily current event links. World Book Online for Kids has colorful illustrated buttons for easy navigation and the articles are written for earlier grade levels. These databases are simple to browse, provide live links, and offer citation help. Enjoy thousands of articles on people, places, and animals. Interactive maps and video clips make learning fun and research projects a breeze.

World Book Classroom offers an interactive learning experience for young children with the Early World of Learning. Three different sections supply games and activities centered on reading, knowledge, and basic skills.

We also subscribe to three specialty sites. Enciclopedia Estudantil Hallazgos is a Spanish language research tool. World Book Discover is designed especially for visual learners with an emphasis on pictures and videos. In addition, it has text-to-speech capabilities perfect for ESL and reluctant readers. Craft Corner offers instructions and inspiration for many great craft projects.

For serious research, fun exploration, and a tremendous electronic resource check World Book Online. Find the seven fomats at our website under Databases and also at our Kids Online Resources link.

To access databases, "user name" is your TCPL card barcode number (no spaces).
PIN number is usually the last four digits of your phone number.
