Director's Notes

As you read this, we are smack dab in the doldrums of winter with little sunshine and chilling temperatures. However as I write this, winter has not yet arrived. The colorful changing of the leaves is over. Fall has taken its toll on the trees, and brown leaves are constantly falling. This is my least favorite time of the year. But maybe not for the reasons you think.

It is not because of cold Indiana winters, but because I fondly recall the previous two seasons. Some of you are aware my wife and I garden. It is something we thoroughly enjoy, and I always hate to see the withering plants. Because it signals the final ending to my summer garden, late fall is my least favorite time of the year. When the first hard frost comes, I make one final harvest of collard greens, our sturdiest garden vegetable. Then I have to find time to do a good cleanup of the garden.

With an early snow this year and other weekend responsibilities in October, I didn't get to the clean-up until the week before Thanksgiving. Experienced gardeners know the final step is a bit of prep work for next year's planting. Winter prep work goes a long way toward the hope of a good harvest in the next growing season. As of this writing, I have not properly done the final prep of turning over and fertilizing the soil.

This gardening analogy applies to my thoughts about the South Branch. The theme for the branch construction groundbreaking was, "Planting for the future." After a very wet spring, but a dry summer, construction efforts moved along very well. This winter, major interior work includes dry wall, painting, flooring, and cabinetry installation. This prep work goes a long way toward the reality of a grand opening in mid-April 2020. I equate this opening to the harvest of a vision set by the TCPL Board of Trustees fifteen years ago.

The theme "Planting for the future" is really a two-fold idea. The construction of this branch and TCPL's ability to provide library resources for the south side of the county this April represents the short-term future. And, by purchasing additional acreage, TCPL completed prep work for a long-term future harvest. The land purchased south and west of the branch parallels forecasts about the growth of greater Lafayette over the next 30-40 years. This additional land can be used for system expansion decades into the future.

Back to the present and the final stages of our branch prep work. Just as happened in my garden this year, we still have lots of work to do before the South Branch opens. We will continue fundraising efforts, purchase furniture, and select shelving units. We will recruit, interview, and hire new staff members. We will select lawn and janitorial services. Best of all, we will alert the 4,000+ surrounding homes that their new neighborhood library is almost ready to serve them. Soon, we will offer a harvest of programs and services for their convenience. We look forward to helping them explore and enjoy the excellent resources that will enrich their lives and the community's life today and tomorrow. Our county thrives, and the Board's vision continues!

Moving Along But Not Yet Move-In Ready!

South Branch 4200 S. 18th Street | CR 430 E | Lafayette

Seed pod book nook

Seed Pods, Gifts & Gratitude

Libraries are increasingly active and interactive places. That's why we hope to purchase some uniquely flexible furniture for the South Branch. One example is this "seed pod" book nook. It converts into different configurations and will complement library furniture saved in storage for this new branch. Eventually, we hope to create a story walk and inventive outdoor areas for sitting, reading, and reflecting. It will be a library, yet so much more.

Professional fundraisers typically specify annual goals. Local generosity however, is historic and visible. We experience it daily in the two TCPL branches, The Portal Technology Center, and Downtown Library renovations. You can also see it in the glowing kids' faces at author visits, Summer Reading Clubs, and thousands of annual library programs!

May we count on your enthusiasm and generosity this year?
